Scott Turow

Scott Turow is a writer and attorney. He is the author of eight best-selling works of fiction, including his first novel, Presumed Innocent (1987) and his most recent, Ordinary Heroes published by Farrar Straus & Giroux in November, 2005; a novella, Limitations was published as a paperback original in November 2006 following its serialization in the New York Times Sunday Magazine. He has also written two non-fiction books— One L, about his experience as a law student, and Ultimate Punishment, a reflection on capital punishment. Mr. Turow has been a partner in the Chicago office of Sonnenschein Nath and Rosenthal, a national law firm, since 1986, concentrating on white collar criminal defense, while also devoting a substantial part of his time to pro bono matters. He has served on a number of public bodies, including the Illinois Commission on Capital Punishment appointed by Governor George Ryan in 2000 to recommend reforms to Illinois' death penalty system, and was the first Chair of Illinois' Executive Ethics Commission which was created in 2004 to regulate executive branch employees in the Illinois State government. He is also a past president of the Authors Guild, and is currently a trustee of Amherst College.

Cyprus Well says:

For those of us who loved Presumed Innocent, this is the book event of the year. Scott Turow has a talent for blending high tension with completely believable characters and tightly plotted storytelling. Played by Harrison Ford in the 1990 film of Presumed Innocent, Rusty Sabich is one of the most interesting and compelling characters in recent fiction. Now, Rusty is 60 years old and incredibly history seems to be repeating itself. Once again he is in the dock with his defence attorney Sandy Stern at his side, facing nemesis Tommy Molto once more. No spoilers here - if you loved Presumed Innocent, read this. If you didn't read that one, read them both! Perfect blockbusting high suspense for a summer read, but with a fierce intelligence and literary power at its heart.
